Dedication

With great pride the Class of 1959 dedicates this Calvertana to the late Samuel Cardinal Stritch in an attempt to express gratitude for all he has done for Calvert High School. In 1923, as Bishop of Toledo, Cardinal Stritch founded Calvert and three years later gave it its name.

Cardinal Stritch found a place in the hearts of Calvert students because of the deep personal interest he had in them and in the school. Each year, as long as he was Bishop of Toledo, he honored the Senior Class by his presence at their commencement exercises. When the school paper was initiated in 1926, he blessed it with his praise and wishes for its success.

An endowment which he has left to Calvert has inspired students in the past and will continue to do so in generations to come. It is a letter which can be found in the first Calvertana. When looked upon monetarily this letter is worth little, but when read and considered thoughtfully it is found to exceed its face value innumerable times, for it contains words of great wisdom. Expressed in it are high ideals upon which students can pattern their lives in order to obtain fulfillment in this life and in the world to come.

My dear Seniors:

There is a debt that you owe to Calvert High School which must consume your mortal lives in paying.

CALVERT DEMANDS that you be men and women of deep faith. Religion must be the dominant force in your lives, for heaven is your ultimate goal.

CALVERT DEMANDS that you be men and women of that fine patriotism which your religion enjoins as a distinct phase of the virtue of charity. Never must you say, even in the secrecy of your hearts, that you are not your brother's keeper, but ever you must remember that you have a social duty to your fellow-countrymen.

CALVERT DEMANDS that you never neglect an opportunity for self-improvement or the acquisition of useful knowledge. A trained and well-informed intellect is, when combined with sturdy Christian character, the world's greatest force.

CALVERT DEMANDS that you be ever, even in your leisure, occupied. No life is so useless as an idle life, no excuse so false as "I could have done better." Only a few years are allotted to you—these you dare not waste.

We wish you every grace and blessing and confidently we trust that Calvert will be made great in you.

With blessing,

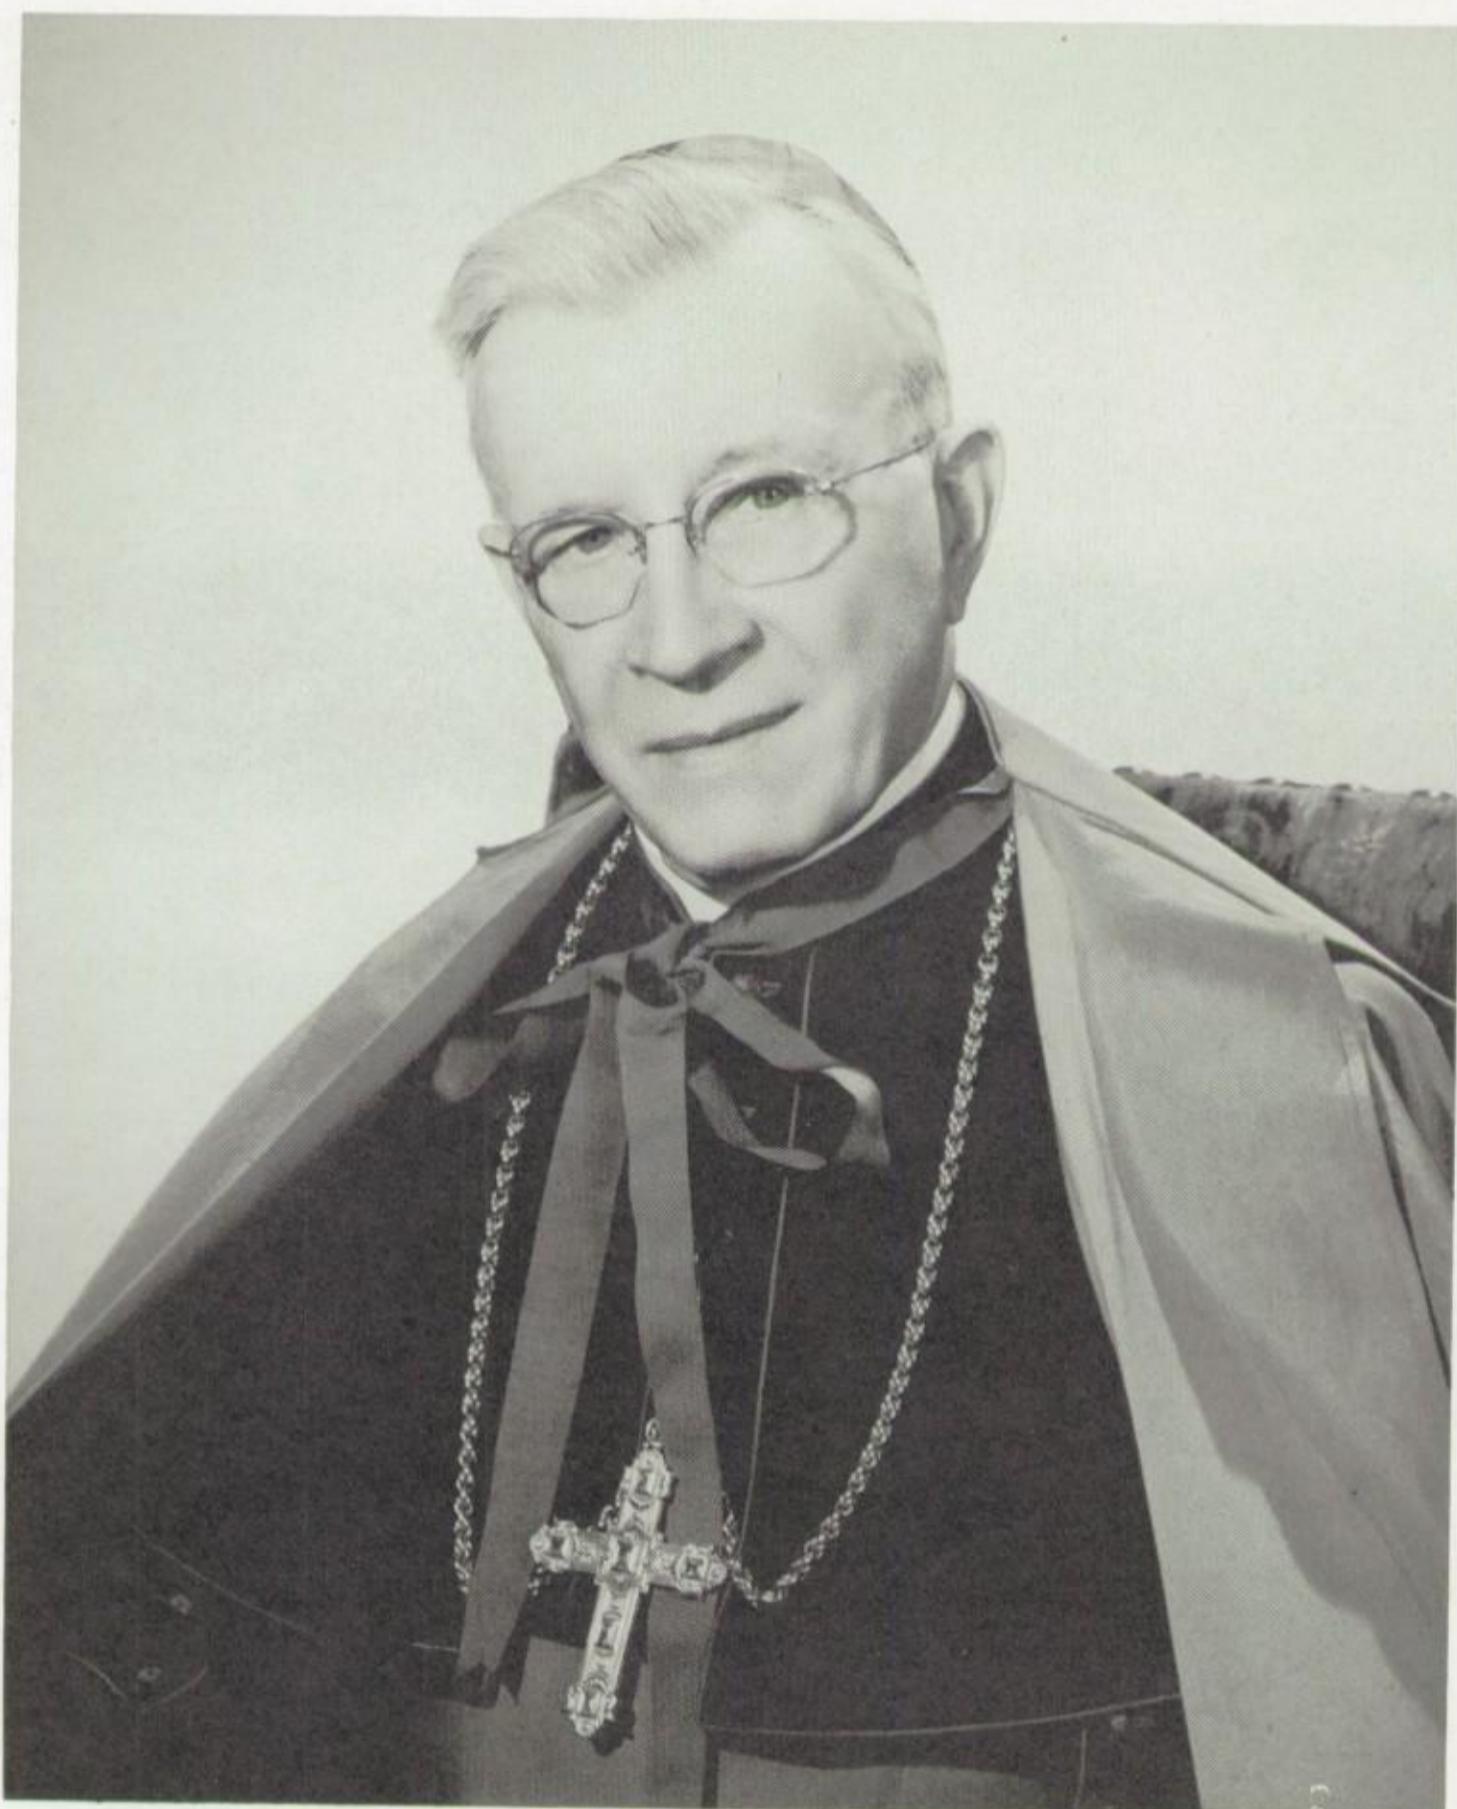

SAMUEL A. STRITCH,
Bishop of Toledo

Calvert demands that you never neglect an opportunity for self-improvement or the acquisition of useful knowledge. A trained and well-informed intellect is, when combined with sturdy Christian character, the world's greatest force.

Religious Training, Guidance, Mass, Sacraments, Retreat

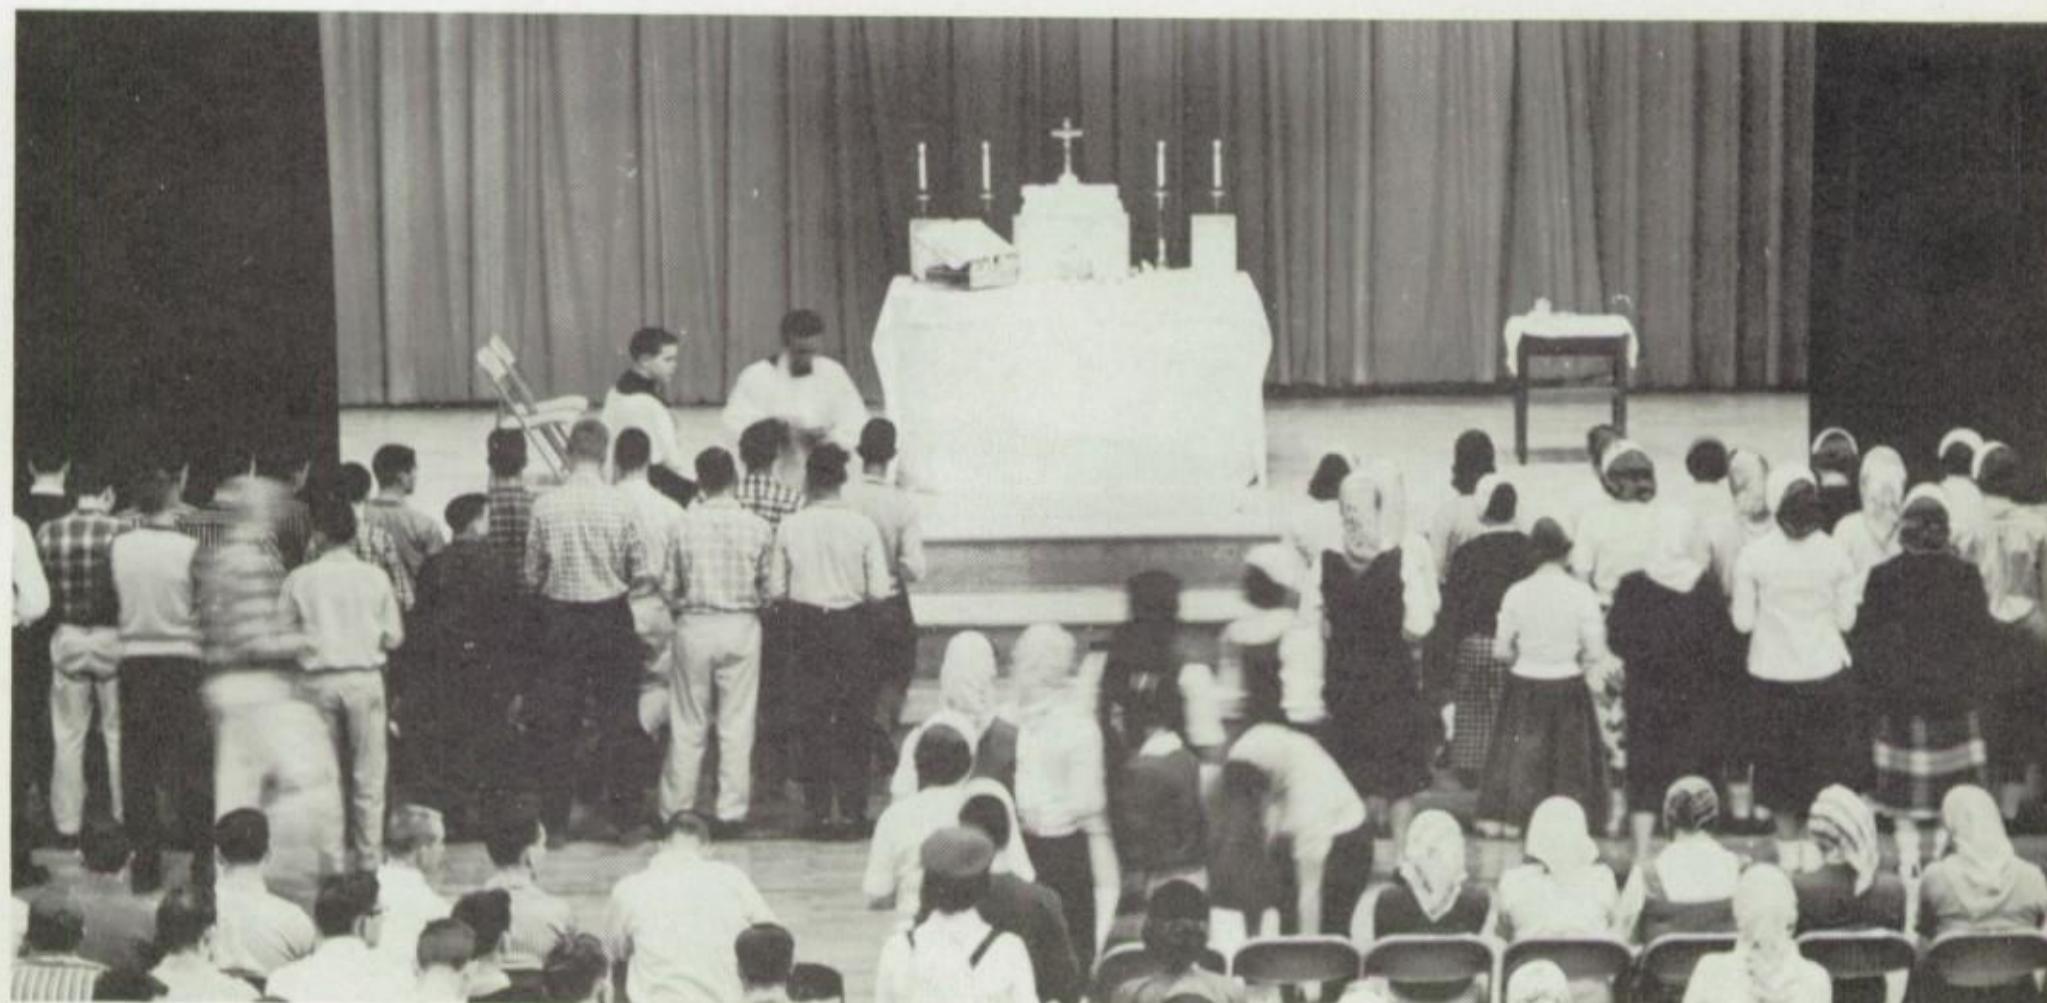

"Religion must be the dominant force in your life, for heaven is your ultimate goal." Calvert provides a religious training for its students which is made complete by instruction in regular classes, personal guidance, an annual retreat, and a weekly opportunity to assist at Mass together. The instruction in classes emphasizes the need and the force of religion in one's life. The freshman year presents an explanation of the greatest act of worship, the Mass. The practice of virtues is emphasized during the sophomore year. A deeper understanding of the history of the Church is the aim of the third-year course. The senior year provides a thorough explanation of future vocations, the duties and privileges of the three states of life, the religious, the married, and the single.

Formula for Making 'Men and Women of Deep Faith'

Father Dunn, Father Ringholz, Father Walsh, and Father Reichert are the religion instructors of the seniors, juniors, sophomores, and freshmen, respectively. Besides giving class instructions, these priests are always available to individual students as counselors. The annual retreat is an important part of the student's religious growth. It consists of three days set aside to help the students increase in grace through daily Mass, religious conferences, spiritual reading, examinations of conscience, and confession. The weekly Mass is an important feature which was added to Calvert's schedule this year. Having Mass every week impresses the idea that religion and life must be combined. The graces received in the sacraments help the student in his school and home life.

A group of freshman English students, under the helpful direction of Sister M. Agnes, are making use of the Science Research Association reading laboratory to determine their main difficulties in reading. Each student has a book in which he records his progress in reading through the use of day-to-day reading exercises. The use of this laboratory was an innovation in the freshman classes this year. Seated are Barbara Muller, John Hoffman, Pauline Derr, Alexander Garlo, Sue Fleck, and Eugene Saad. Waiting in line to receive their reading assignments for the day are Jerome Grillot, William Baltzell, Ann Frankhart, and Marianne Hoover. Alvern Boes and Joseph Poignon are taking their cards to their places to work on them.

For Self-Expression,

English classes, which are included among each year's required subjects, form a main part of Calvert's program to produce students with "trained and informed intellects." They aim to help each student develop the ability to express himself in a satisfactory manner and to understand and appreciate the ideas of others through reading. In addition to the customary study of literature, grammar, and speech, a reading laboratory developed by the Science Research Association was added.

Paul Winterhalter, Daniel Ring, and Michael Wright are listening carefully to Michael Felter as he presents his arguments in favor of the Right-to-Work bill, one of the topics chosen as a subject of debate in the speech classes. This is one part of the training speech students receive to enable them to be better speakers in the future.

Sophomore English students, taught by Sister M. Callista, dramatize "The Third Ingredient," a short story by O. Henry. Elizabeth Murray and Rose Marie Gillig tell the title and author, while Susan Clark, Janet Rider, and Lawrence Ball join hands to symbolize the completion of the stew when the third ingredient, the onion, was added to the roast beef and the potato.

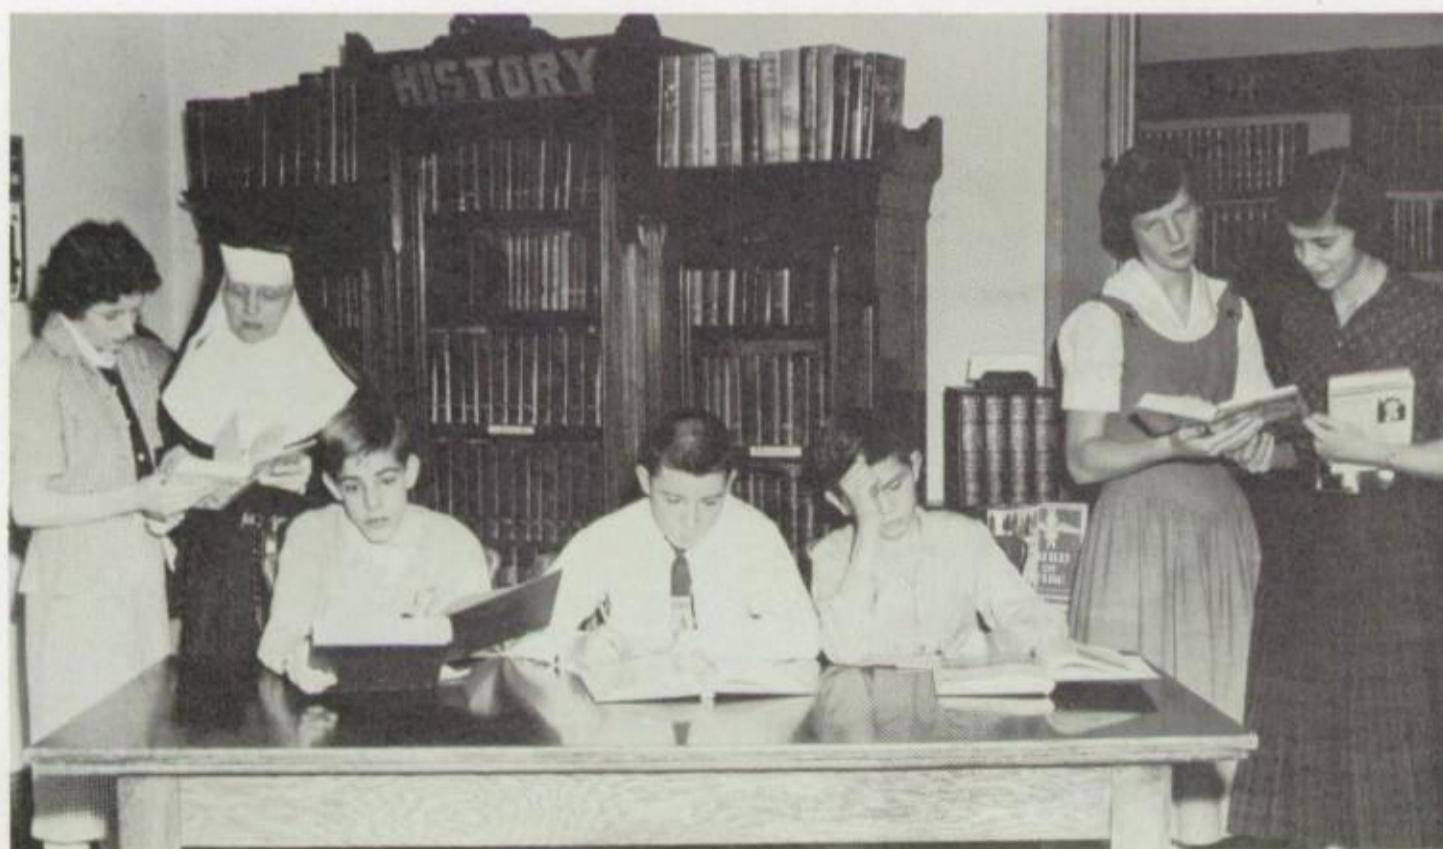

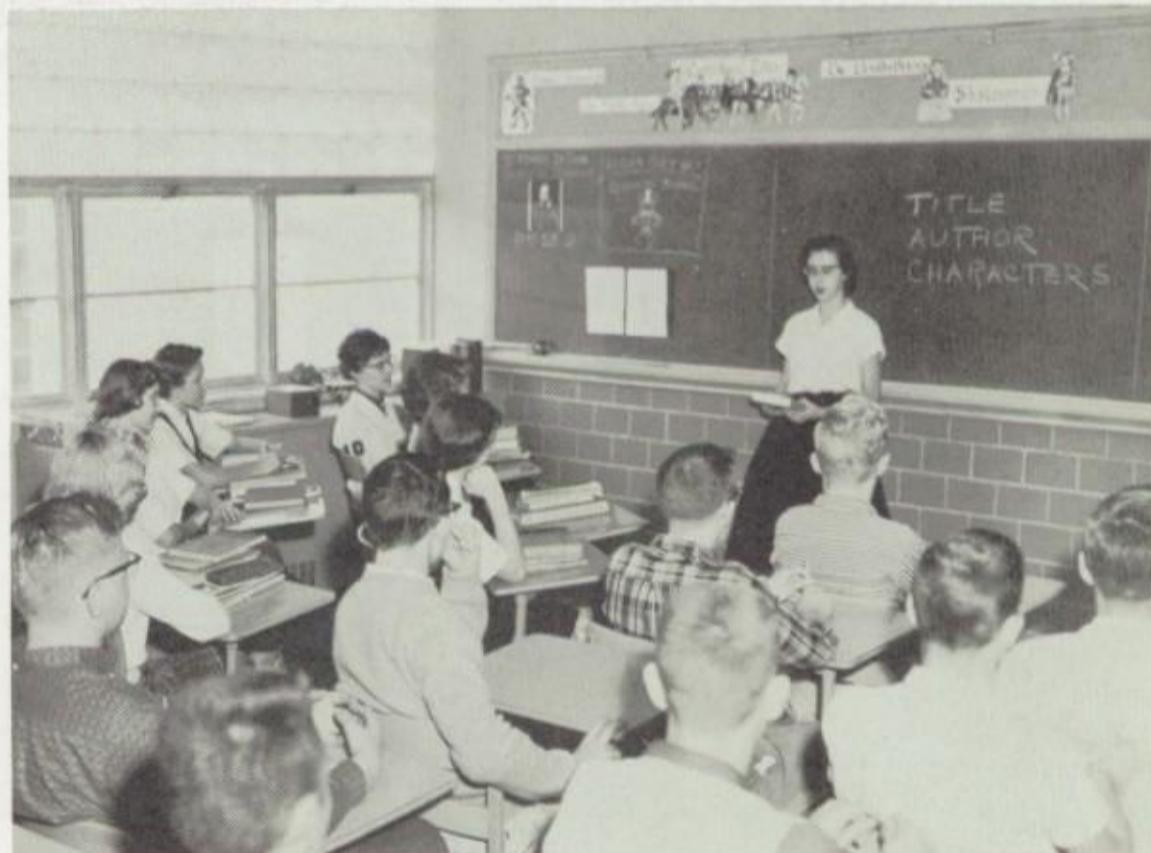

In a senior English class Jane Mattes explains Irene Welty's drawing of an Elizabethan theatre to Daniel Stein, Adelene Aiello, Anna Daniel, Irene Welty and Kenneth Gase. As part of their study of English literature the class completed several projects on Macbeth and William Shakespeare, one of which was to report on a typical theatre of Shakespeare's time.

Members of the junior English class listen attentively as Judy Mathias gives her book report. The words "title, author, characters" which appear on the blackboard show the main points to be brought into the report. Giving their book reports in class enables the students to share their enjoyment in reading with other students in the class.

Pleasure in Reading

Literature enriches the lives of the students with its broad picture of life in England and America from earliest to modern times. It presents to them the finest and most beautiful of prose and poetry in the English language and opens to them expansive new worlds of ideas, adventure, and beauty. Grammar and vocabulary study provide the students with the tools for self-expression, the correct and effective use of words. This skill is further developed by practice in the speech class.

One of the first things freshmen are introduced to at Calvert is the library. Library work is part of the first-year course of study in English, and the students are encouraged to make use of the facilities available at all times. Sister M. Charlotte, who is in charge of the library, is giving Jacqueline Ferstler a brief summary of what she will find in the book she has chosen. Bruce Nitecki, Patrick Tie- man, and Thomas Kennedy are looking up information in some of the many reference books that can be found in the small but well-equipped library. Nancy Gilliland and Anne Hurley leaf through other books chosen from the wide range of selections which include travel, fiction, adventure, science, literature, and biography.

Latin, Spanish Provide Wide Interests, Extended Views

These third year Latin students are studying the Auxilium Latinum, a Latin magazine. Seated are Sandra Renninger and Mary Pat Omlor. Standing are Sue Reimer, Deanna Kummerer, Audrey Depinet, Kathleen Kraft, Sister M. Emmanuel, Latin teacher, Phyllis Pacifico, and Carol Stanford.

The study of Latin literature at Calvert includes Greco-Roman mythology in the first year, selections from Caesar's Gallic War in the second year, and works of Pliny, Ovid, Cicero, Virgil, and other classical authors in the third and fourth years. A study of selections of ecclesiastical Latin is included in the last two years. Senior Latin Club members publish The Inter Nos, through which they have an opportunity to express themselves in Latin, using what they have learned in class. The first year Spanish class emphasizes the acquisition of the ability to speak in simple sentences through the practice of numerous dialogue patterns. A study of the background, history, geography, and culture of Mexico and Central America is made in the first year. The second year continues with an investigation of Spain and the countries of South America. The study of fundamental grammar is continued, along with Spanish literature and composition. Through participation in Spanish Club activities the students become more familiar with the culture and customs of the people of Spanish-speaking countries.

Senior Latin students gather information for their Latin magazine, The Inter Nos, which they publish themselves under the guidance and direction of Sister M. Emmanuel. The 1958-1959 editors are Donald Brown, Margaret Kastner, Helen Decker, Edward Warnement, Suzanne Englehart, Daniel Ring, Mary Depinet, Edward Schleter, Elizabeth Lucas, Alicia Huffman, and Daniel Clevenger.

Members of one of the first-year Latin classes practice verb conjugations at the blackboard, while the other students check them from their places.

Future Technicians,

In the boys' biology class Mr. Kukoy is showing Charles Ardner and Paul Winterhalter a cocoon and insects which the biology class collected. David Gibson and Gerald Meier are looking in their lab manuals for descriptions of these insects.

The growing need for scientists in medicinal, nuclear, and spatial research and exploration is being emphasized constantly in world news today. American scientists are needed to help keep America and the rest of the world free from the clutches of Communistic terrors. Calvert, now as in the past, invites its students to advance their interests and knowledge in science through four courses offered—the fundamental courses of general science and biology, and the more advanced courses of physics and chemistry. General science teaches basic things about the laws controlling the universe. Biology is the study of plant, animal, and human life. Physics, the science dealing with matter and energy and the physical changes in matter, is considered the fundamental science because all other sciences use its principles in their own special fields. The composition of materials and the changes in composition which these materials undergo is taken up in chemistry.

Engrossed in the study of astronomy, one of the many phases of general science, these students use models of the universe to demonstrate what they learned from their textbooks. To Mary Ann Kummerer and Nancy Gilliland the study of the relative positions and revolutions of the sun, earth, and moon prove interesting. The orbit of an artificial satellite attracts John Stanford as he explains the reasons for the orbit to Anthony Reed and Ann Hurley.

Chemists Learn Fundamentals for Careers in Science

Sister Cordula is explaining to Mary Oddou how the resistance and effort is equal to the height of the angle on an inclined plane. At the same time Richard Shaw, James Johnston, and Thomas Strausser are discovering that a meter stick placed at a certain point will balance if the weights at each end are in proportion.

Sister Maurice, chemistry teacher, is explaining the reaction of base and acid solutions to red and blue litmus paper to Mary Depinet, Daniel Clevenger, and Irene Welty. John Kroll, Betty Wilhelm, Mary Ann Bell, Mary Ann Koller are testing the time required for water to reach the boiling point at different heights from the flame. Jean Gilliland and Margaret Kastner observe the procedure Charles Reinhart is using to check the accuracy of a balance.

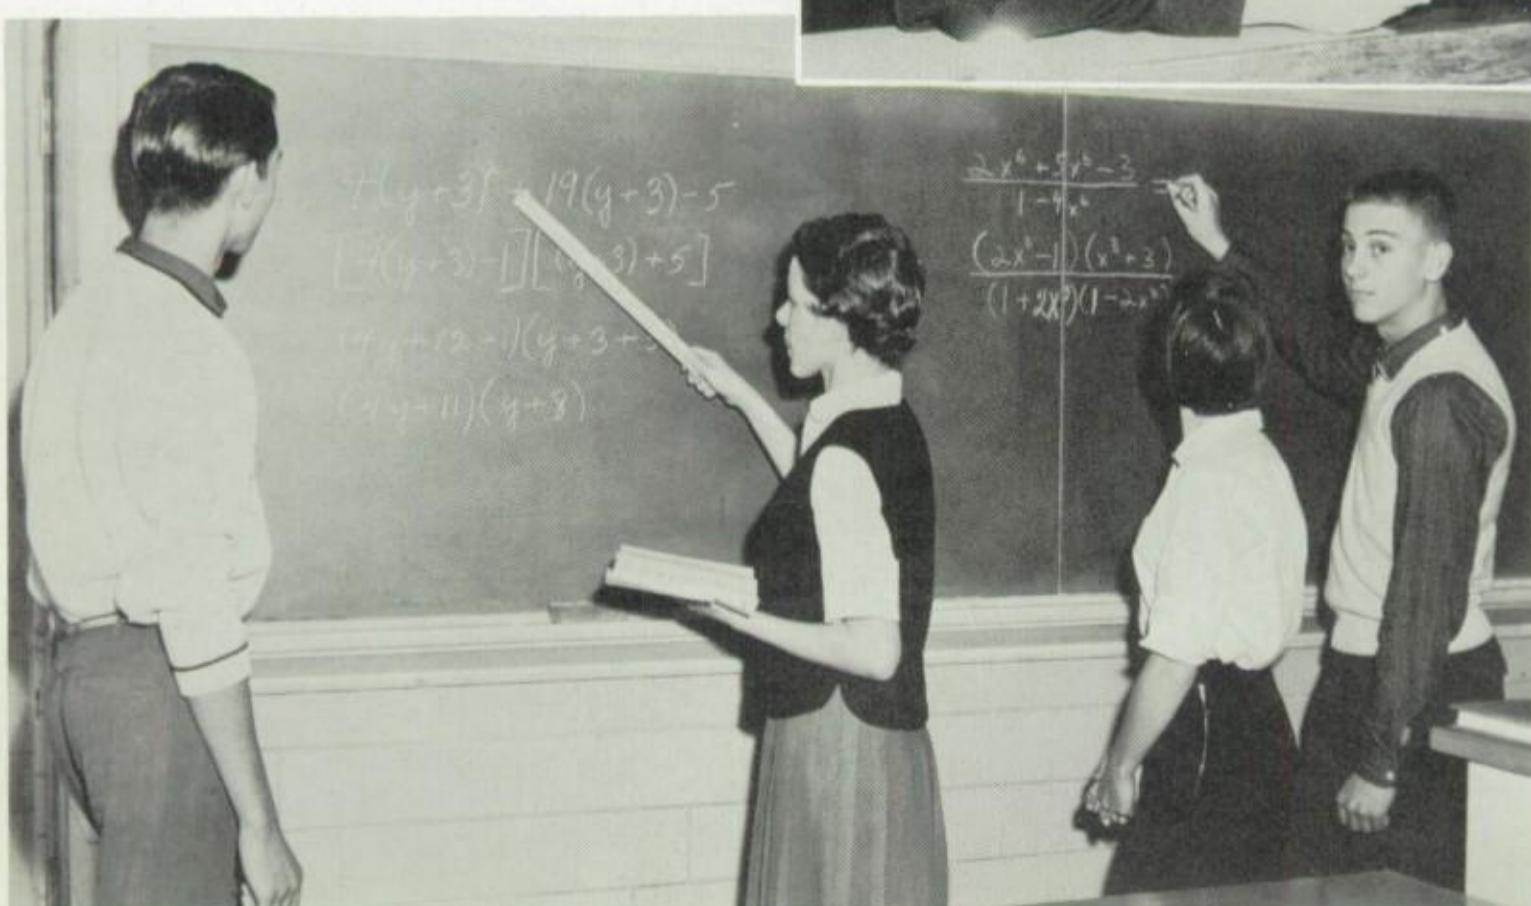

Mathematics—Exercise in Logical and Systematic Thinking

Mr. Diringer presents an explanation of a spherical triangle to the seniors in his solid geometry and trigonometry class: Donald Stein, Robert Reinman, Eileen Dow, Geraldine Welter, Elmo Smith, Timothy Hurley, Charles Reinhart, Daniel Stein, and David Steinmetz.

When the students of Calvert graduate, the jobs, businesses, and professions which they choose will be many and varied. It is then that the effects of their study of mathematics in school will show. The chief effect is the development of the ability to think and reason in an orderly manner. Many students study algebra, geometry, and other forms of mathematics in the classes of Calvert's fine teachers.

Having encountered a problem in simple fractional equations, Cora Omlor and Robert Albus seek the instruction of Sister Rose Marie. During the first year a foundation for advanced mathematics and science is laid.

Sara Wade explains the procedure of removing parentheses and simplifying an algebraic equation in advanced algebra class. On the right John Gruss shows Stephanie Kramer the method of factoring and reducing fractions.

Skilled Hands Make Plans and Finished Products

Robert Feasel, Kenneth Hoerig, Ronald Mathias, and Gerald Bentz are working out a problem in mechanical drawing. This class gives the students the fundamental training necessary for the advanced study of engineering, architecture, and drafting.

In shop class Ronald Rochester, Edward Warnement, Frank Ruggiero, Michael Huffmon, Michael Keller, Michael Magers, Mr. Zalar, Eugene Schoen, Michael Hart, and Kenneth Gase look on approvingly as George Fretz demonstrates his skill in wood construction.

Social Duties to Fellow-Countrymen

James Hayes, James Saad, Mr. Zalar, Frank Mangiola, and Robert Altwies discuss the qualifications and duties of a United States president and his cabinet, part of the course of study in civics.

Sister Aloysia leads a lively question-answer session in her ancient history class. The freshman boys are L. Ley, T. Kistler, R. Gruss, T. Ferstler, P. Tieman, K. Funkhauser, L. Bish, T. Schreiner, G. Daniel, E. Zirger, W. Puesey, J. Betz, R. Troxell, J. Poignon, W. Kramer, B. Nitecki, D. Rochester, R. Kern, D. Elchert, and R. Depinet.

Stressed in Social Science Classes

Mr. Milette and his American history students, Fred Benner, David Kummerer, William Stein, David Aiello, James Creeger, Alice Grieve, and Marjorie Whittaker, discuss the addition of the forty-ninth state, Alaska.

Practicing brief forms in Sister Barbara's shorthand class are Phyllis Pacifico, Mary Alice Weinandy, Carol Kerkhoff, Eloise Piper, Dorothy Koby, Sue Reimer, Audrey Depinet, Joan Dornan, Alice Grieve, Kathleen Kraft, Deanna Kummerer, Donna Mathias, Sandra Renninger, Patricia Dunn, Diane Huffmon, Shirley Kelbley, Judy Mathias, and Carol Ring.

Commercial Courses Prepare for Business Careers

The study of commercial subjects enables the student to prepare himself for the business world by acquiring knowledge of customs and procedures necessary to run a good business. In shorthand, the student learns the technique of taking dictation by means of time-saving simplified methods. The purpose of office practice is to familiarize the student with the business machines and equipment. No business can be without an accountant for whom the study of bookkeeping is essential.

Rebecca Spencer, Patricia Weinandy, Sharon Mitten, Martha Moore, Joyce Steinmetz and Rita Company demonstrate the proper use of the office practice machines. By means of a rotating system each student becomes familiar with such machines as the full-key adding machine, the comptometer, and the duplicating machines.

Listening to Sister Mark's explanation of the correct method of making an eight-column work sheet are Ancilla Fisher, Helen Hess, Doris Jordan, and Judy Brickner. This course prepares bookkeeping students for the business world and also gives them a better knowledge and understanding of accounting.

Calvert's Homemakers of Tomorrow in Action

Since most girls choose marriage as their vocations, the home economics classes rank high in importance. In these classes are taught the skills and attitudes which help girls take their places in life as good Christian wives and mothers. In general, the girls learn the fundamentals of cooking and sewing during the first year, and in the second year they add to this experience in home decorating and furnishing.

Donna Mathias, Beverly San Gregory, Norma Rogier, Sandra Reis, and Janis Flechtner, second-year home economics students, are examining the glassware, fine china, and sterling silverware displayed on the table.

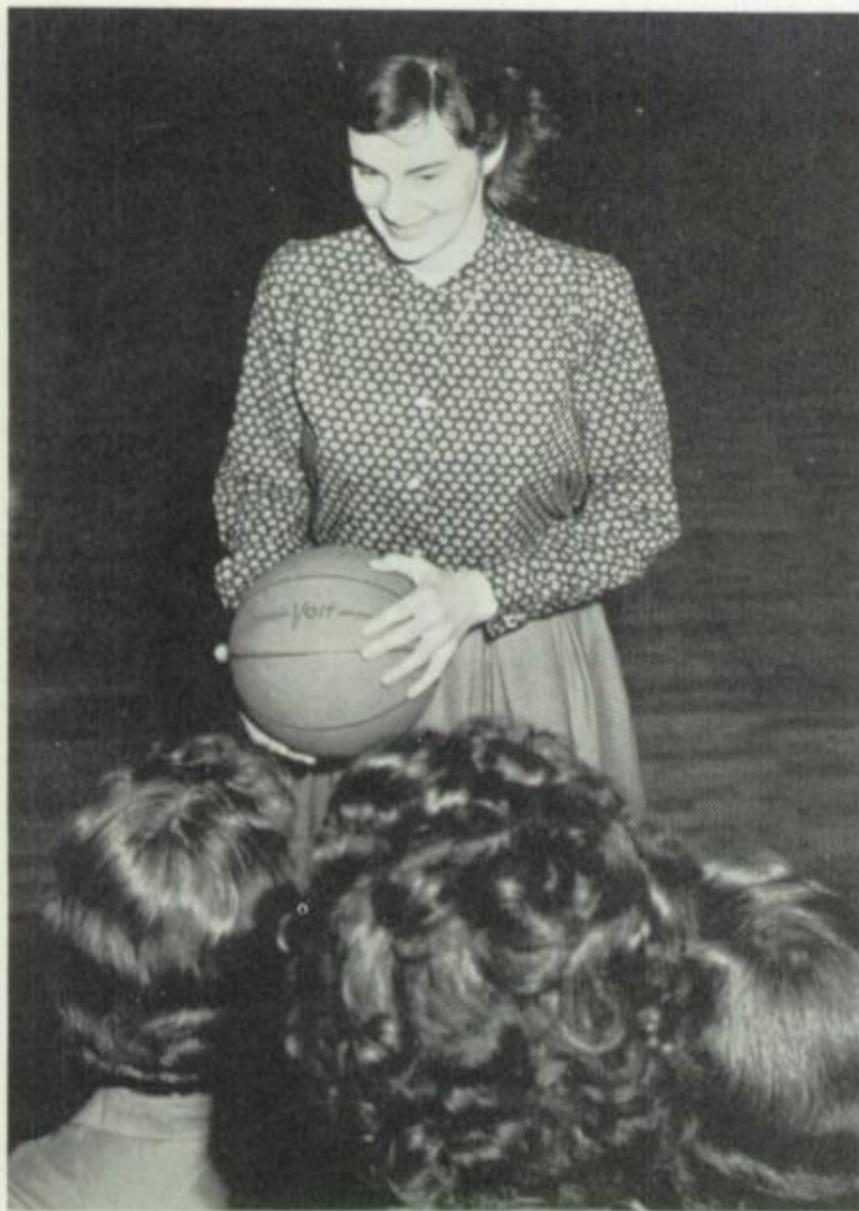

Dianne Panning, Carolyn Hart, and Sue Shelt are working on the curtains which the class made for the typing room.

Jane Jordan, Marie Huss, and Donna Pishner are about to taste the cake they made. Sister Alice Marie smiles approvingly.

Calvertana – Concerning Calvert – Memories of the Year

Co-editors, Betty Lucas and David Steinmetz, and Mary Depinet, copy editor, are shown working on plans preliminary to production of the yearbook.

The names of the co-editors and staff having been announced, the senior class set out to produce the biggest and best yearbook Calvert has ever had. Since the founder of Calvert, Samuel Cardinal Stritch, had died the preceding spring, it was fitting that this "Calvertana" be dedicated to him. A letter sent to Calvert's first graduating class by Cardinal Stritch, then Bishop, provided the theme. Soon followed efforts to plan the pictures, layout, copy, and division pages in hopes that this production would capture some of the joys, events, and friendships of the happiest days of each student's life, those spent at Calvert.

Copy writers gather for one of their after-school sessions. They are Timothy Hurley, Rose Kirian, Patricia Weinandy, Sandra Walk, Ancilla Fisher, and Margaret Kastner.

'The Forest Prince' Presented by Calvert Glee Club

Entranced by the music of lilting waltzes, vigorous marches, and gay themes based on the music of Tschaikowski, the audience thoroughly enjoyed "The Forest Prince". Vaslav, chief of the Cossacks who are holding Tatiana for ransom, goes to Tsar Mikhail's court to obtain the ransom. He finds himself admiring the Tsar and offers the help of the Cossack forces against their common enemy, the Tartars. The two peoples defeat the Tartars and pledge peace. After events have proved that Vaslav is the son of the Tsar, Vaslav and Tatiana are given permission to marry.

At the climax of the operetta, Tsar Mikhail, Daniel Ring, in the presence of the princess of Russia, Margaret Kastner, acknowledges that Vaslav, Donald Brown, now chief of the Cossacks, is really his long lost son who had been captured as a boy by the Cossacks.

Officers of the Glee Club and the Genesian Club, who acted as general chairmen in charge of the operetta production committees, are Charlene Theis, Margaret Kastner, Donald Brown, William Leahy, David Steinmetz, Ancilla Fisher, Marjorie Zoeller, and Charles Reinhart. Sister M. Merici is the Glee Club directress and moderator of the dramatics club.

Senior Class Play—Exciting

District Attorney Flint, Edward Schleter, quizzes Larry Regan, Karen Andre's gangster friend, an unexpected witness, played by Donald Brown.

A tense courtroom was the setting for the senior class play, "Night of January 16th". With Judge Heath presiding, District Attorney Flint and Defense Attorney Stevens staged a keen battle of wits to determine the guilt or innocence of Karen Andre. Did this efficient secretary kill her employer, Bjorn Faulkner? Was she aided and abetted by her gangster friend, Larry Regan, who challenged the evidence of wealthy and influential John Graham Whitfield and his daughter Nancy, wife of the murdered Faulkner?

Fast-moving, exciting, strong characterizations by the witnesses carried the play along to its final scene of acquittal for Karen Andre.

Sigurd Jungquist, played by William Felter, Bjorn Faulkner's faithful and trusted employee, presents some startling information in one of the play's dramatic moments.

Daniel Clevenger, Doris Jordan, Judie Brickner, Kenneth Gase, Paul Winterhalter, Marjorie Zoeller, Daniel Ring, Ancilla Fisher, Charlene Theis, Sue Spraggins.

Mystery, 'Night of January 16th'

Karen Andre, Joyce Steinmetz, on trial for her life, demands to be permitted to testify after a mysterious phone call.

John Graham Whitfield and his daughter Nancy, Faulkner's widow, return to explain their sudden disappearance.

We Want a Touchdown! That Is All!

Mr. Zalar, better known as "Zip", has been teaching at Calvert for ten years. For the first nine of those ten years he was head football coach. This past year he was elevated to the position of athletic director. Although he has more responsibilities than formerly, he still loves to coach football and basketball. It is his duty and pleasure to teach the fundamentals of sportsmanship to his "freshies". "Zip" is always in a cheerful mood and he always has a good word of advice or praise for his students. In all his classes and coaching activities "Zip" has one main goal—to make good citizens.

Among the duties of Mr. Paul Milette are those of head coach of the football team, reserve team basketball coach, and teacher of American history. As head coach "Iron Mike" turned out another fine football team which finished the season with a 4-2-2 record. His understanding and willingness to help the boys have won him their respect and confidence. He has worked hard with the reserves to develop a better and stronger varsity bench. Above all, Mr. Milette has taught his history students the meaning of the true American way.

Under the skilled and experienced guidance of Mr. Joseph Kukoy, the Senecas ended the 1959 basketball season with a record of ten wins and eight losses. A tireless worker, Coach Kukoy stresses the great importance of good ball handling and often takes to the floor to demonstrate his techniques of play. Often reminding his players to "shape up", he says, "The main thing to remember is to keep in top physical condition." Mr. Kukoy's other sports activity is that of line coach of the football team. Here he uses discipline and drill to develop the strength of Calvert's line.

Alumni Report

Alumni contribute to the welfare of Calvert in various ways: practically, through the promotion and support of school and alumni activities by attendance and participation; financially, through gifts to the alumni fund and to the building fund; and spiritually, through prayers for the continued growth and success of the school, its faculty and its students in every area of endeavor.

Under the leadership of Dr. O. G. Burkart, president, Evelyn (Heck) Myers, vice-president, Karen Cramer, secretary, and Charles Homan, treasurer, the association sponsored many activities during the past year.

On August 30, the annual alumni dance, which realized $680 for the Calvert library, was held at Meadowbrook. June 1 found the members of the silver jubilee class of 1933 meeting for dinner and a program in the school cafeteria. The officers attended a special Mass for deceased alumni in the Convent Chapel on June 8, the alumni reunion day.

Proceeds from this year's alumni fund drive will be used for library equipment and books when the proposed new addition to Calvert is completed.

Career Day, in which representatives of various fields discuss with students the job outlook and requirements of their fields, was laid aside for the time being. A series of talks by speakers representing general areas—education, industry, business, etc.—for the entire student body at general assemblies was substituted. Instead of focusing attention to any specific trade or profession, these speakers dealt with vocations in their broader aspects, stressing the necessity of serious preparation for a vocation in high school.

Alumni also contribute to Calvert as individuals. Many are members of the Boosters and follow avidly both the scholastic and extra-curricular progress of those now in school. A large number assisted with the Calvert winter festival. A very personal interest in Calvert is taken by alumni with brothers and sisters enrolled in the school.

The Alumni owe a special debt of gratitude to librarian Sister Mary Charlotte, moderator for the association.
